School Health Services (SHS) is an important aspect of community health. It is possible to increase the health level of the community and achieve growth in the health of future generations through School Health Services.

At i-Systems College, SHS is incorporated into Community Nursing as part of our nursing education in year 2 of the nursing program.

The ultimate objectives of nursing students' attachment and exposure to the field are to prepare them to be future-capable nurses as administrators, educationists, service providers, researchers, as well as for training and guidance.

To achieve these objectives, the students allocated to the Maternity and Child Health Clinic participated in SHS during their community nursing attachment. These students were actively involved in all SHS activities under the close observation and guidance of the Nursing Lecturer and the Ministry of Health (MOH), who specialize in that field.

Hence, having better-educated nurses in both theory and practice in this field is hoped to meet the ultimate aim of SHS, which is to promote, protect, and maintain the health of school children and reduce morbidity and mortality.
